

Conservative treatment of ectopic pregnancy in a caesarean section scar

黃建榮

Chuang J;Seow KM;Cheng WC;Tsai YL;Hwang JL

摘要

Abstract

Ectopic pregnancies sited in dehiscence cesarean section scars have a high risk of rupture and bleeding. Attempts at operative therapy frequently end in loss of the uterus. A connection with the cavum uteri justifies an attempt at dilatation and curettage. We describes a patient with combined systemic and local intra-amniotic methotrexate (MTX). The uterus was preserved.

.

.