

QUALITATIVE ANALYSIS OF A WOMAN

Simon Wu

*A man thinks and has his will.
A woman feels and has her way.*

Symbols : F (General), ♀ (Biological)

G.M.W. : 50000

Physical Properties :

1. Fragile, handle with care.
2. Boils at nothing.
3. Freezes at any minute.
4. Melts when properly treated.
5. Quite viscous, particularly when in love.
6. P.E. (Potential Energy) changes in wearing super high-heels or seeing some small mammals.
7. K.E. (Kinetic Energy) varies according to individual specimens, may be very great (like Chi-Cheng 紀政) or very small (like Lin Dai-Yu 林黛玉).

Chemical Properties :

1. Turn green when placed before a better specimen.
2. Frequently very acidic due to vinegar. (pH varies according to the concentration.)
3. Can absorb a good amount of food material particularly chocolates.
4. Possesses great affinity to diamonds, gold, silver, ruby, etc.

Biological Properties :

1. Transrational (if not irrational).
2. Has a substantial amount of subcutaneous fat (superficial fascia) that contributes to a high buoyancy and a so-called 'figure' as a secondary sexual character.
3. May present a complementary or, on the contrary, an antagonistic relationship with the male counterpart depending on the degree of compatibility between the two.

4. Going on diet not because of high blood pressure or cholesterol levels.
5. May like to be married to a poem, or given away by a novel.
6. Contributes to many minor traffic accidents, a trait of mediocrity, in contrast to the serious ones made by man.
7. Very susceptible to hysteria.

Effect on Peace :

Makes peace better than Kissinger does, since woman makes possible the slogan 'make love, not war'.

Effect on Population :

Directly gives rise to the population crisis and so necessitates the slogan 'make love, not babies'.

Uses :

1. Direct manufacturer of miniature human beings.
2. The most effective income reducing agent ever known.

By-product :

Woman's tears

- The most effective water power in the world.
- An incredible solvent that may even dissolve immaterial things ---- A man's mind, for instance.
- Just a small quantity works wonders.
- The process of shedding tears usually employs a medium of sound, which appears to some men as music, and to others as noise. CARE! BOTH ARE PENETRATING!!

Precautions :

1. Highly explosive.
2. May be corrosive.
3. Highly radioactive, with a half-life of 40 years which she regards as 40 carats.
4. May well manipulate man.

Occurrence :

Found whenever and wherever 'he' exists.

Note :

The author wishes to emphasize that this is just an essay for fun. He is not deliberately (but rather subconsciously) 'stepping on the tails' of this so-called "gentler, kinder, warmer, more sympathetic, more understanding, more co-operative" creation of God.
