Introduction

Background

- Along with the integration of the history, politics, economy, culture and technology of the society, we are gradually migrating into a interdependent era; the information needs regarding different formats, languages and regions have also been increased.
- Many countries and organizations sign up bilateral or regional agreements, through exchanging personnel, technology, and funding, both parties mutually support each other to achieve certain goals.

Background

- By expanding international exchange and cooperation, libraries can utilize resources, share scarce resources, reduce financial pressure, and fulfill readers information needs regarding international resources.
 - To learn how to provide better services via observing other countries or regional libraries' successful cases.
 - To enhance international visibility and competitiveness via accessing resources from advanced countries.

The importance of international exchange and cooperation

1. To understand the development trend of the world, expand horizons, and to promote the development of local libraries.
2. To extend the influence, to let the world to see our specialized resources.
3. To consolidate international exchange, to advocate cooperation, to mutually complement collections.
4. To compensate the lack of foreign literatures.
5. To reference advanced management models and service experience from other countries.
6. To accelerate globalization and internationalization.

The importance of international exchange and cooperation

- In the 21st century, libraries face a much open environment. Go global, broaden horizons, so that libraries can keep up with the pace of world development.
- A complete and comprehensive international exchange and cooperation plan is an important indicator to measure the development of the library. It stimulates the library development.
- By learning experience from other countries, libraries can be more creative and innovative in the aspects of service, management, system, and techniques.

Research questions

1. Which international professional library organizations are important to Taiwan's libraries? Which of them are worth paying attention and participating in?
2. Which LIS international conferences are important to Taiwan's libraries? Which of them are worth actively participating in and learning from?
3. What is the status of participating international exchange in libraries of our country?

Opinions and suggestions

Meanings of participating in international conferences

1. To exchange practical experiences with library specialists across the country, to obtain the latest development trends of library management, services and promotions. (Lib. B)
2. To learn, share, and expand horizons, increase publicity of Taiwan, and to realize the international development trends. (Lib. C)
3. To improve the ability of administration execution, enhance viewpoints in LIS field, and to stimulate the creativities. (Lib. G)

Opinions and suggestions

Problem or difficulties of participating in international conferences:

1. It is not encouraged to go abroad in the colleges, budget and leave for statutory reasons application still has to strive for. (Lib. E)
2. No funding support (Lib, K)
3. Functions of sightseeing seems to be greater than international exchange. Therefore, it didn't really serve the purpose of international publicity and exchange. In addition, it is too centralized on certain organizations or meetings, so Taiwan's international exchange can not be generally promoted. (Lib. E)

Opinions and suggestions

Suggestions:

1. Systematically planning
2. Periodically form delegation
3. Funding support
4. Present articles and posters other than just attending.
5. Take positions on international organizations
6. Encourage students' participations
7. Exchanges should be reciprocal
8. Create sharing and exchanging platform

Conclusion and Suggestions

Conclusions

1. IFLA and ALA are two international organizations that Taiwan library community participate the most
2. ICADL is the international symposium that the Taiwan LIS community participate the most
3. Only a few libraries participate in international meetings, they only attend meeting in certain areas, and most of them do not have a stable budget source.
4. It is not generally popular of participating in international conferences and academic meetings among LIS teachers in Taiwan

Suggestions

1. Library Association of the Republic of China should be more active.
2. The NCL should strive for budget and funding and also collaborate the library community to promote the international academic exchange.
3. The management level of all categories of libraries should set a stable budget for international exchange activities
4. All categories of libraries should encourage their staff to enhance language ability and presentation skill, to be more actively in international exchange activities.
5. LIS schools in Taiwan should actively participates in international exchange and cooperation
